Cellular Respiration is a chemical process with the following equation: C6H12O6 + O2 → H2O + CO2. All organisms, including those capable of photosynthesis, go through the process of cellular respiration. The overall reaction breaks down a carbohydrate, most frequently modeled by glucose, and converts the energy stored in that molecule into the most basic cellular energy, ATP.

Cellular Respiration | Unit 3: Cellular Energetics - AP ...

Adenosine triphosphate (ATP) is the main product of cellular respiration, and the molecular energy of the cell. Aerobic metabolism results in a much higher yield of these energy carrying molecules due to the fact that it can use oxygen as a final electron acceptor in the electron transport chain.

The fourth Step of Cellular Respiration; occurs in the inner membrane of mitochondria FADH2 and NADH transfer their electrons to the ETC. The electrons pass down a series of proteins, pumping out H+ atoms every time they go down a level. The Electron finally stops when it reaches Oxygen (the last electron receptor) and water is produced.

Ap Biology Cellular Respiration Study Guide

In cellular respiration, electrons are not transferred directly from glucose to oxygen. Each electron is coupled with a proton to form a hydrogen atom. Following the movement of hydrogens allows you to follow the flow of electrons. NAD+, a coenzyme, is the electron carrier that temporarily holds the hydrogens in the cell. Coenzymes are organic
