Mental reading is the slowest type of reading. Readers who practice mental reading can read to about 250 words a minute. Auditory reading is a bit faster, as it requires the person to listen to every word that is read and not sound them out. Those who practice this usually read 450 words a minute. The fastest type is visual reading.

The Science of Reading – BIG REFLECT

Back in the BCE years (Before Covid Era), considerable interest had been building among practitioners and policymakers in curriculum and instruction built on the “ Science of Reading. ” That critical conversation has been largely sidelined for obvious reasons as states, districts, and schools prioritize setting up and running remote and hybrid
