However, approximately six to eight percent of hair sheds each day, according to the American Hair Loss Association 1. When the number of hairs shed outpace the number of actively growing hairs, hair loss occurs. Once hair loss occurs it can take months for hair to grow back, and the growth does not always look encouraging.

How to tell the difference between broken hair and new growth

If you notice new hair growing, whatever the colour, you'll probably notice that it's quite fine in texture. This is because it's simply 'vellus' hair – that's the fine, downy-like fuzz we're all born with. It might cover your entire patch and it might stick around; or it could simply fall out again.
