Relationship between Sociology and Law. Sociology and Law are two interwoven topics. Society is directly related to Sociology and in this matter, every society follows certain laws. Therefore, Laws are the essential part of the society. Sociology helps law to better understand society for smoother regulation and formation of laws. Similarly, the law is important to regulate a society.

Relationship between Sociology and Law

The sociology of law (or legal sociology) is often described as a sub-discipline of sociology or an interdisciplinary approach within legal studies. Some see sociology of law as belonging "necessarily" to the field of sociology, but others tend to consider it a field of research caught up between the disciplines of law and sociology.
