You can plant cool-season vegetables earlier in the spring (like late February), including Asian greens, lettuce, radishes, kale, and peas. For heat-loving warm-season vegetables, wait until the soil and the weather have warmed up. Tomatoes, squash, and bush beans shouldn't go out before April or May.

Listed by product name, this guide outlines the months that each fruit or vegetable is typically grown and harvested from farms throughout the Pacific Northwest. Apples: August through November. Apricots: June and July. Artichokes: September and October. Arugula: May through December.

Pacific Northwest Seasonal Fruits and Vegetables

September in the Northwest is a great time to add new perennials or to fill empty spots in your garden beds.

Your gardening to-do list for autumn should include planting tulips, crocus, daffodils, and other spring bulbs.

Gardeners in milder climates can plant all gardening is possible in most parts of the Pacific Northwest. Late plantings of warm- season crops such as corn and beans can be harvested until the first killing frost. Cool-season crops, such as kale, turnips, mustard, broccoli, and cabbage, withstand frost and grow well during cool fall days.
