Unitary patent - Wikipedia

When it comes into operation, it will establish a European patent with unitary effect (the ‘ unitary patent ’) and a new patent court. The unitary patent is a legal title that will provide uniform protection across all participating countries on a one-stop-shop basis, providing huge cost advantages and reducing administrative burdens.

Unitary patent - European Commission

The unitary patent system raises issues of foundational importance in the fields of patent and intellectual property law, EU law and legal harmonization, which it is the purpose of the book to engage with.

The Unitary EU Patent System: Justine Pila: Hart Publishing

Unitary Patents will make it possible to get patent protection in up to 25 EU Member States by submitting a single request to the EPO. They will build on European patents granted by the EPO under the rules of the European Patent Convention (EPC), so nothing will change in the pre-grant phase and the same high standards of quality search and examination will apply.

EPO - Unitary Patent - European Patent Office

The current proposal for a single patent system across the EU, the Unitary Patent and Unified Patent Court, which has been under discussion for many years, is not yet in force. To enter into force the Unified Patent Court Agreement (UPCA) must be ratified by the three largest patent granting states, namely France, Germany and the UK.

The Unitary Patent and Unified Patent Court - GOV.UK

The Unitary Patent system is inextricably linked to the creation of the Unified Patent Court, which will have jurisdiction over Unitary Patents and "classic" European patents. The EU regulations establishing the Unitary Patent system (No 1257/2012 and No 1260/2012) entered into force on 20 January 2013, but they will only apply as from the date of entry into force of the UPC Agreement, that is, on the first day of the fourth month following the deposit of the 13th instrument of ratification ...

EPO - When will Unitary Patents be available?

The new unitary patent system would be vulnerable to a Brexit. Not only is the new system limited to EU member states, but the UK must also ratify the agreement for the new system to come into effect. A Brexit would require the existing agreement to be re-written, and the new unitary patent rights to be extended to the UK as a non-EU jurisdiction.
